

Foundation 4Life® Legacy Centers —Service Momentum

Caring about others and providing service are at the heart of the 4Life mission. Throughout the history of Foundation 4Life, we have built valuable partnerships with numerous humanitarian organizations who share in our mission to build the lives of children, families, and communities around the world. Our dedication to service continues to grow, and the fruits of our efforts will help change the lives of individuals for many years to come. Foundation 4Life is in an exciting momentum phase! During 4Life Convention 2016: United, Foundation 4Life announced a new Legacy Center program, with centers to be built in South Africa and Colombia. Distributor leaders donated over $150,000 USD to help fund the creation of the first two Legacy Centers.

What are Foundation 4Life® Legacy Centers?

Legacy Centers provide resources to improve self-reliance for vulnerable, high-risk children and adults. Each center facilitates programs and opportunities that target the individual needs of each participant. Legacy Centers are built in partnership with humanitarian organizations that are already trusted within the communities they serve.

The Legacy Center program represents the next phase of our philanthropic goals: to build stronger connections within vulnerable communities and focus on the needs of individuals. The program will provide hope and stability, one person at a time.

Nkosi Johnson School, a Foundation 4Life® Legacy Center Johannesburg, South Africa

This multi-classroom school will support the local Department of Education's early childhood initiatives and provide enhanced academic opportunities that are unmatched in the area. Foundation 4Life has supported Nkosi's Haven since 2001, and we are honored to elevate our support of over 60 students at the facility and the surrounding community with a preschool program and remedial grade classes.

Together, Building People®

SOS Children's Villages

SOS Children's Villages is the world's largest organization dedicated to providing homes and adoptive families for orphaned and abandoned children. With more than 540 villages in 134 countries, SOS serves over one million people every year through care, education, and health programs.

Nkosi's Haven

Nkosi's Haven is named after Nkosi Johnson, a young AIDS activist who passed away at the age of 12 from AIDS-related illnesses. Separated from his birth mother at an early age, Nkosi and his adoptive mother Gail created Nkosi's Haven in 1999 so moms and children affected by HIV could stay together. Foundation 4Life began its support in 2001.

Foundation 4Life® Legacy Center Bogota, Colombia

This family development center will provide a home for neglected, abandoned, and abused children. The center will provide preschool programs for children, skills training in computers and robotics for teenagers, trauma counseling, and a safe recreational space. The Bogota center will provide a protective environment for children and youth, plus education, love, counseling, shelter, and food.

Leaders of the SOS Children's Villages Youth Empowerment program will determine the 40 most at-risk youth in the community and invite them to be part of the program. Selected youth will have access to individualized development plans to become self-reliant citizens. Each child will have a structured curriculum to help them overcome challenges and regain strength and confidence. The children will be monitored closely to insure they stay on track and have an opportunity to be reunited with family.

There are more than 570 million children living in poverty around the world. Our focus is on building lives—one child, one family, and one community at a time. Foundation 4Life and 4Life family members are changing the lives of individuals. Legacy Centers increase our service momentum and raise our impact to new heights. Together, we can give hope to individuals and communities in need.
